

WINTER INTENSIVE STUDY PROGRAM

in Analytical Psychology

February 15 – February 20, 2010

C.G. Jung Institute Zurich, Küssnacht

This Winter Intensive Study Program will lay emphasis on fundamentals of Analytical Psychology, dreams, fairy tales, individuation, alchemy, religion and philosophy, art and creativity.

The Winter Intensive Study Program provides an excellent opportunity for an exchange of thoughts and social contacts among the Institute's students and participants of different geographical and professional backgrounds.

It is intended that lectures, seminars and discussions can be followed by those with a limited background in Jungian Psychology, but will at the same time be of value to those with professional psychological training and interests. The courses are taught by analysts of the Institute and internationally renowned guest lecturers.

In addition to the regular lectures and the special seminars, the curator of the Institute's Picture Archives will meet with the ISP students and show some examples from the extensive collection. There will be an excursion organised to a site of historic importance for analytical psychology and to the baroque monastery in Einsiedeln with the famous Black Madonna.
